I photograph animals and birds because I must. The beauty found in Nature is mysterious, unexplainable, and often ignored.

As a photographer, I have to answer this question for myself: "Is there something I can do to benefit what I love?" If I can prompt people to see the beauty in each animal and to become aware of our shared responsibility in preserving them, then I have done something to benefit the natural world.

My lifestyle drives my need for photographic and decor innovation. I live and work in outdoor spaces!

My design plan for Wink Gaines Photographer centers around printing my photographic images on an aluminum substrate that is inherently resistant to the long-term aging effects of weather, sunlight, and water but is still comparable in beauty and presentation to images offered for luxe interior spaces. I now partner with the developer of an exclusive and innovative metal print process for their production.

I am pleased to bring to the design marketplace a technologically advanced indoor/outdoor art product! These exceptionally beautiful photographic art prints are durable, sustainable, eco-friendly, and long-lasting. The finish is luminous and lends an unparalleled depth to the printed image. Dynamic, large format, fine art prints can now be displayed outdoors with no chipping, peeling or fading and they're just as beautiful indoors as well!

Surround yourself with what you love.

Wink Gaines Photographer and the AluminArte print process redefine and refine the art and display of individually crafted photographic images for residential, commercial, and hospitality venues. It is not often that nature, technology, sustainability and high design meet. With AluminArte, my wildlife conservation and protection missions are mirrored in the green print process and sustainable materials that I choose for display.
